Such articles should be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Without any exception I think it is the finest remedy on the market and nothing would induce me to do without it."

HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS.

THE CARE OF VELVET.

Half of the beauty of velvet is in its freshness, and this must be retained. The chief clerk of one of the most successful velvet departments in New York gives her experience in this regard. As every one else does, she had all velvet unrolled as soon as it came in, but, unlike many, she takes care to paper every yard of it before loosely folding it for the boxes.

Large sheets of white tissue paper are used, laying them over the right side of the velvet, and folding them from each or one end. The paper keeps the gloss and prevents the pile crushing, as well as keeping the dust from it. In cleaning up the stock it is only necessary to dust the boxes, inside and out, thus saving the surface from the deadly whisk broom. If a brush had to be used at any time, it was a soft bonnet whisk, which, when brushed against the pile, did not injure it.

With this care velvet has remained in stock six months and looked in perfect condition.—Dry Goods Economist.

HOT WEATHER DIET.

The doctor sauntered in looking maddeningly cool in her pale blue chambray waist and her light weight black silk skirt. She eyed the heated individual lying in a muslin negligee on the lounge with some disapproval. The heated individual granted out a greeting, fanned as vigorously as she could, took a drink of iced lemonade from a glass pitcher at her elbow and then antedemocratized the weather. The doctor listened with professional patience.

"What did you have for breakfast this morning?" she demanded finally, removing temptation in the form of iced drinks to a distance and seating herself on the foot of the lounge.

"Could scarcely eat any breakfast," growled the warm person. "I had a couple of cups of coffee, a roll and some eggs and bacon. I like eggs and bacon."

"Um," remarked the doctor in non-committal tones. "Did you have cream with your coffee?"

"Yes, of course," said the patient who wished to be treated for heat.

"Do you really wish to be cool, healthy and energetic for the rest of the summer?" demanded the doctor.

"Or do I prefer to be sizzling sick and languid? You may proceed on the former assumption," said the patient flippantly.

"Very well," said the doctor, beginning to write a prescription. When it was written she handed it to the patient, who read:

"Breakfast: fruit, plenty of it; whole wheat or graham bread without butter; coffee, one cup without cream. Occasionally on rainy or cool days, vary by having a broiled chop, a boiled egg or a dish of well-cooked rice."

"Luncheon: Fruit, sliced bread, whole wheat or graham; wheatena, rice or breakfast hominy served with fruit syrup or preserved fruit; vegetable salads. Tea or coffee, without cream, and hot. Vary by using wafers and marmalade or the like."

"Dinner: Clear soup, consommé or bouillon, hot; fish or meat, green peas, beets, asparagus, beans, boiled rice or hominy, stewed tomatoes, salad of lettuce, tomatoes or cucumbers; dessert of fruit. Small cup of black coffee."

"Will you be kind enough to explain this remarkable document?" asked the patient when she had read it.

"Cheerfully," said the doctor. "Almost all the ills that flesh is heir to in summer are due to improper diet. Our climate differs considerably during July and August from that of the arctic regions, and yet we store away heat-producing food in a way that would astonish the Eskimos. I verily believe. We eat meat as freely as we do in December."

"We take fats into our systems with perfect indifference—cream, milk and butter. Besides this, we force the stomach to do as hard work in summer as it does in winter until it rebels. Then we complain of not having any appetite, or being fagged out, and finally we come down with dyspepsia."

Now, the way to keep cool is to eat cooling foods—that doesn't mean cold food, observe—and to give the stomach as easy a time as possible. The less work it has to do the cooler the body will be. Fruits and fresh vegetables are laxatives. If plenty of them are eaten, they will give sufficient nourishment. Cold drinks are a delusion and a snare. They chill the interior of the stomach. The surrounding air seems hotter by contrast and perspiration is checked. Moderate perspiration is one of the greatest aids to coolness. Now, will you try my prescription?"

"For a night," agreed the heated individual.

"That will mean all the summer," said the doctor, cordially. "Once tried it is always used."—New York World.

Lamp wicks soaked in vinegar will burn with a more brilliant light and will not smoke.

Slices of oranges are rather unmanageable. A better way to prepare this fruit for the table is, after peeling, to take a fork and a sharp knife and cut into small pieces. This makes a juicy, agreeable dessert.

Water and vinegar bottles which have become discolored can be cleaned with coarse shot or with small pieces of raw potato. Put a little cold water in the bottle with the shot or potato and shake until the stains are removed.

Dr. Duncan, writing for Demorest's, says that pure cinnamon makes an invaluable drink if one is where there is any danger of typhoid fever from poor drainage or impure water. Steep and drink freely, as it has power to destroy infectious microbes.

Equal quantities of lemon juice and glycerine make a fine emollient for the skin. Use at night and wear a pair of well perforated kid gloves. In the morning wash the hands thoroughly in warm water, rub well with a few drops of lemon juice, and, after a few applications, the skin will be soft and smooth. It is equally good for the face and neck.

A use has been found for old umbrellas frames. They make excellent frames for branching and vining house plants. With a file, a pair of pinchers and some fine wire or stout thread any additions can easily be woven in to make the frame closer, according to the need of the plant. We can imagine that such a canopy covered by a fuchsia, or nasturtium vine in full bloom would be a thing of beauty.

of Consumption is stopped short by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If you haven't waited beyond reason, there's complete recovery and cure.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent, are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

J. STONE RECOVERING.

Owes His Health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

From The Sun, Gainesville, Fla.

The many friends of J. Stone, of Palmer, Fla., will be pleased to know that that estimable old gentleman, who has for years been a great sufferer from rheumatism, is recovering. At one time it was impossible for Mr. Stone to use his right arm. The gentleman in question was in the city yesterday, and when asked by a Sun man to give some reason for his recovery, he said:

"Well, sir, you will not believe me perhaps, but my recovery is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I think then an excellent remedy and must accept this opportunity, if you will permit me, to advise all who suffer as I have done to try them. I'll guarantee relief. Two years ago I was suffering from rheumatism; you know what condition I was in. I read an article in a Christian paper of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I took seven boxes of them. The result was more than any human being could have expected. I grew better fast."

"Someone then advised other medicine, saying that I had taken enough of the pills. I heeded the advice and the result was I grew worse again and lost the use of my right arm. I could not move it a particle. Eight weeks ago I commenced to take the pills again and now I can use my arm without any pain whatever. They are a wonderful pill and I drove several miles to-day to purchase another box of them."

"I wish you would publish the following affidavit I swore to. I ask this of you as a means of displaying my gratitude as well as to endeavor to save some other poor sufferer."

The Sun man consented and the following is the affidavit which the happy man swore to yesterday before J. C. B. Rooser:

The above was sworn to and subscribed before me this 21st day of May, A. D. 1895.

J. C. B. Rooser, Notary Public.

Hot Water for Sunburn.

One of the very best ways to treat a severe case of sunburn is to bathe the face, constantly for fifteen or twenty minutes with soft water as hot as it can be borne. This treatment takes out the redness and removes the sting, and the skin returns to its normal state much sooner than if left alone.
